Re Item V

Reasoned statement with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

Reference is made to the following documents:

- D1: US 2003/091952 A1 (CARANO ALDO ET AL) 15 May 2003 (2003-05-15)
- D2: US-A-5 829 970 (YOUSEFIAN JOSEPH Z) 3 November 1998 (1998-11-03)
- D3: US-B1-6 435 870 (WALDE KEVIN C) 20 August 2002 (2002-08-20)
- D4: WO 01/39687 A (KELES AHMET OEZLEM) 7 June 2001 (2001-06-07)

The document D1 is regarded as being the closest prior art to the subject-matter of claim 1 and shows an orthodontic brace having a support plate which, when in use, fits against the keratinised palate of the patient away from the incisive papilla, and has side pieces extending from opposite sides of the support plate adapted to grip the molars to be corrected and forcing them in appropriate directions using spring means. From the disclosure of D1 it is also seen that the presence of an osseointegrated implant or of tooth-borne components which discharge forces to neighbouring teeth and/or used for stability of the device are also necessary. The subject-matter of claim 1 differs from D1 in that the brace is specifically designed without tooth-borne components so that the forces are entirely transmitted to the support plate and the palate and not to other teeth.

The subject-matter of claim 1 is therefore new (Article 33(2) PCT).

The problem to be solved by the present invention may be regarded as that of reduced need for patient cooperation as well as eliminating reaction forces on other teeth which would otherwise influence the dental situation.

The solution to this problem proposed in claim 1 of the present application is neither mentioned, nor hinted at, in the prior arts and is thus considered as involving an inventive step (Article 33(3) PCT)

CLAIMS

1. A corrective orthodontic brace comprising:
 - a support plate, so shaped as to fit closely, in use, against the keratinised tissue of a user's palate, whilst seating adjacent but free of the incisive papilla;
 - side pieces extending from opposite side regions of said support plate to lie, in use, adjacent respective upper molars on opposite sides of the mouth and adapted to grip the or each such molar to be corrected, via a connection which will allow the molar to move relative to the support plate;
 - spring means, acting to bias the or each molar gripped by a side piece away from the front of a user's mouth by transmitting the resultant force to said support plate, with no tooth-borne component;
2. The orthodontic brace of claim 1 wherein the spring means is incorporated into the side pieces.
3. The orthodontic brace of claim 2 wherein the spring means are adjustable.
4. The orthodontic brace of any preceding claim further comprising attachment means, located on the support plate for attachment of restraining means to temporarily restrain the action of the spring means to facilitate fitting of the brace.
5. The orthodontic brace of any preceding claim wherein the support plate is contoured to the vertical and horizontal parts of the palate and the rugae.
6. An orthodontic brace substantially as described herein with reference to and as illustrated by any appropriate combination of the accompanying drawings.
